MEMORANDUM OF OPINION AND ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR
PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT

ENTERED IN CIVIL DOCKET

8/24/90

INTRODUCTION

Plaintiff's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment, Defendant's Motion for a Continuance Pursuant to Rule 56(f), and Defendant's Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment were heard on April 27, 1990. Richard C. Stearns of the Department of Justice appeared on behalf of plaintiff. Peter J. Busch of Howard, Rice, Nemerovski, Canady, Robertson & Falk appeared on behalf of defendant. The court has considered the briefs filed by the parties and various amici curiae, as well as the oral arguments of counsel. Good cause appearing, the court now GRANTS plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment, and DENIES defendant's motions.

BACKGROUND

The City of Oakland's Nuclear Free Zone Act, Ordinance No. 11062 (the "Ordinance"), was adopted by the voters of Oakland, by initiative, on November 8, 1988. Plaintiff brought suit in September 1989, challenging certain portions of the Ordinance as facially unconstitutional and preempted by certain federal statutes, regulations, and executive orders.

The Ordinance prohibits any person, within the City of Oakland, from knowingly engaging in "nuclear weapons work," which is defined as "any work that has as its purpose the development, testing, production, maintenance or storage of nuclear weapons, the components of nuclear weapons, or any secret or classified research or evaluation of nuclear weapons." The definition of a "person" contained in the Ordinance includes the federal government and private firms performing under contract to the federal government.

The Ordinance also restricts the transportation of "nuclear weapons or other hazardous radioactive materials" through Oakland, and prohibits any person from reprocessing, storing, dumping, or using "hazardous radioactive materials" within Oakland. Further, the Ordinance prohibits Oakland, except in certain limited situations, from contracting with, investing in any person or company "knowingly engaged in nuclear weapons work," or with their "agent, subsidiary or parent organization." It also bans the operation or construction of nuclear reactors in Oakland, and requires facilities engaged in nuclear weapons work

1 to post signs, "clearly visible to any passing person," bearing 2 the legend "Nuclear Weapons Work Conducted Here." It requires 3 annual reports by persons engaged in activities covered by the 4 Ordinance describing those activities and the "steps being taken 5 to cease such activities within two years" of the Ordinance's 6 passage. It contains civil enforcement provisions, including 7 authorization of citizen suits, and provides criminal penalties
8 for violations of its provisions.

9 Plaintiff attacks those portions of the Ordinance that 10 purport: 1) to prohibit nuclear weapons work; 2) to regulate the 11 use or transportation of nuclear weapons and hazardous 12 radioactive materials; 3) to prohibit, with some exceptions, 13 Oakland from contracting with, or investing in nuclear weapons 14 makers; 4) to prohibit operation and construction of nuclear 15 reactors; 5) to require the posting of signs at facilities 16 engaged in nuclear weapons work; and 6) to require annual reports 17 by persons engaged in activities covered by the Ordinance.

18 Plaintiff does not challenge those portions of the 19 Ordinance that regulate investments by the City of Oakland in 20 United States Treasury securities and that require the posting of 21 "Nuclear Free Zone" signs at city boundaries.

22 Plaintiff asserts in its complaint that various portions 23 of the Ordinance violate the Supremacy Clause (Art. VI, cl. 2), 24 the War Powers Clauses (Art. I, sec. 8, sub. 11-14, and Art. IV, 25 sec. 4), the Commerce Clause (Art. I, sec. 8), the Property 26 Clause (Art. IV, sec. 3, cl. 2), and the Enclave Clause (Art. I,

1 sec. 8, sub. 17) of the United States Constitution. Plaintiff
2 also asserts that various portions of the Ordinance are preempted 3 by the Hazardous Materials Transportation Act, 49 U.S.C. §1801 et 4 seq., and regulations issued thereunder; the Atomic Energy Act, 5 42 U.S.C. §2011 et seq.; and federal regulations, statutes, and 6 executive orders prohibiting the public disclosure of classified 7 and sensitive unclassified information.

8 Plaintiff moved for summary judgment in January, 1990 on 9 all causes of action in its complaint except the second, which 10 alleges that the Ordinance violates the Commerce Clause of the 11 Constitution. The City of Oakland opposed plaintiff's motion, 12 and filed a cross-motion for summary judgment on all causes of 13 action in the complaint and a motion for a continuance to permit 14 discovery on outstanding factual issues. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f).

15 On January 29, 1990, plaintiff filed a motion for a 16 protective order staying discovery. Because it appeared that 17 there were threshold legal issues to be resolved, the court 18 granted that motion by order dated February 1, 1990, and stayed 19 discovery pending the outcome of the motions for summary judgment 20 now before the court.

21 DISCUSSION

22 The court finds that there are no genuine issues of 23 material fact, and that good cause exists to grant plaintiff's 24 motion and to deny defendant's motions. The Ordinance taken as a 25 whole is so comprehensive, so complete, so all-encompassing that 26 it cannot help but conflict with the rights and authority of the 1 federal government. In arriving at this conclusion, the court is 2 not unmindful of two important legal considerations. First, 3 whenever possible, statutes should be construed so as to avoid 4 conflict with the Constitution. Second, there is a presumption

5 against preemption of state law by federal law, and generally 6 state laws should be analyzed point by point for actual conflicts 7 with federal law.

8 1. Federalism:

9 By creating a federal system in which power is shared by 10 states and the federal government, and distributed among branches
11 of government, the framers of our Constitution carefully ensured 12 that no single individual or group gained unchecked power. These 13 divisions do not merely preclude the majority from infringing 14 upon the rights of a minority -- they also ensure that a 15 minority, which is locally influential, does not act outside its 16 zone of authority and thereby interfere with the will of the 17 broader majority.

18 Under the framers' plan, a zone of authority is reserved 19 for the states (and derivatively for local governments), and 20 another is granted the federal government. Some matters lie 21 beyond the authority of both the states and the federal 22 government, and others lie within the authority of both.
23 However, where there is a conflict, the federal government, if 24 acting within its demarcated bounds, is supreme. Thus, in 25 McCulloch v. Maryland, 17 U.S. 316, 436 (1819), Chief Justice 26 Marshall wrote: "the states have no power by taxation or

1 otherwise to retard, impede, burden or in any manner control, the 2 operations of the constitutional laws enacted by Congress to 3 carry into execution the powers vested in the general
4 government."

5         Defense policy is clearly within the zone of authority
6 granted the federal government. U. S. Constitution, Art. I, sec.
7 8, sub. 11-14. As to defense policy, the people of the City of 8 Oakland are not without a voice; however, theirs is not the only 9 voice.

10         Thus, to some extent, the people of the City of Oakland 11 sacrifice self-determination. However, absolute self-12 determination would undermine democracy, as well as the rule of 13 law. In a democracy, those in the minority must sacrifice self-14 determination and agree to abide by, and live under the law of 15 the majority.

16         An example from history illustrates this point. The 17 Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions, constructed by Thomas 18 Jefferson and James Madison, presumed that any state could render 19 a federal law unenforceable by determining that the law exceeded 20 the limits of federal authority. These resolutions were invoked 21 at the time of the Civil War. If we learned any lesson from that 22 war, it is that localities that have views that differ from those 23 of the nation as a whole may not exempt themselves from the duly 24 enacted laws of the nation.

25 2. Constitutionality of the Ordinance:

26         Among other things, Oakland's Ordinance prohibits nuclear

1 weapons work; regulates the use or transportation of nuclear 2 weapons and hazardous radioactive materials; prohibits, with some 3 exceptions, Oakland from contracting with, or investing in 4 nuclear weapons makers; requires the posting of signs at 5 facilities engaged in nuclear weapons work; and requires annual 6 reports by persons engaged in activities covered by the 7 Ordinance. These provisions, in purpose and effect, interfere 8 with the federal government's constitutional responsibility and 9 authority to provide for the common defense. The exercise of war 10 powers is the exclusive province of the federal government under 11 the Constitution. See Tarble's Case, 80 U.S. 397, 408 (1871).
12 States and localities may not enact legislation that impedes or 13 hinders the national defense, regardless of whether the defense 14 activities are carried out directly by agencies of the federal 15 government, or by private contractors acting as agents of the 16 federal government. As the New York Court of Appeals stated in 17 Fosella v. Dinkins, 494 N.Y.S.2d 878, 880, 110 A.D.2d 227 (N.Y.), 18 aff'd., 66 N.Y.2d 162, 495 N.Y.S.2d 352, 485 N.E.2d 1017 (1985):

19 [a] State or political subdivision of a State may 20 not hinder the Federal Government's deployment of 21 conventional or nuclear weapons within its 22 territory simply because of a concern -- perceived 23 in good faith as it might be -- that the presence 24 of such weapons would constitute a danger to the 25 local population. This becomes apparent when one 26 reflects that if every local government was given the power to restrict the establishment and operation of Federal military installations or weaponry located within its geographic jurisdiction, the power of the Federal Government to raise and maintain an army or navy would, as warned by the United States Supreme Court in Tarble's Case, be destroyed.

1           In City of Los Angeles v. United States, 355 F.Supp. 461, 2 464 (C.D. Cal. 1972), Los Angeles sought damages from the United 3 States for failure to pay municipal pilotage fees for entering 4 and departing Los Angeles Harbor. All of the vessels listed in 5 the complaint (except two) were United States Naval ships. All 6 were involved in defense related activities. The court ruled for 7 the United States, finding that Los Angeles was impermissibly 8 trying "to regulate and control the manner in which [the United 9 States] shall carry on War or provide for the National Defense."
10 See also Feliciano v. United States, 297 F.Supp 1356 (D.P.R.
11 1956), aff'd., 422 F.2d 943 (1st Cir.), cert. denied, 400 U.S.
12 823 (1970) (Puerto Rico could not render inapplicable executive 13 order that created the Culebra Island Naval Defensive Sea Area).

14           Defendant argues that a local enactment may not be 15 invalidated on the basis of the War Powers Clauses unless the 16 interference with the federal government is direct or 17 substantial. In support of this standard, defendant cites De 18 Canas v. Bica, 424 U.S. 351, 354-55 (1976) (local regulation 19 upheld if it "has some purely speculative and indirect impact" on 20 an exclusive federal power), and Penn Dairies v. Milk Control 21 Commission, 318 U.S. 261, 275 (1943) ("An unexpressed purpose of 22 Congress to set aside statutes of states regulating their 23 internal affairs is not lightly to be inferred and ought not to 24 be implied where the legislative command . . . is ambiguous.").
25 The court disagrees with defendant's statement of the applicable 26 standard.

1           However, even if the standard advanced by defendant 2 applied, the court would reach the same conclusion. The 3 Ordinance's interference with the federal government may be small 4 relative to the global extent of defense operations, and no one 5 would argue that Oakland's Ordinance, in and of itself, poses an 6 insurmountable risk to national security. However, the Ordinance
7 is so broad that it will clearly interfere with United States
8 defense policy directly and substantially.

9           Defendant also cites Arthur D. Little, Inc. v.
10 Commissioner of Health & Hospitals, 395 Mass. 535, 481 N.E.2d 441 11 (1985). In Arthur D. Little, the Supreme Judicial Court of 12 Massachusetts upheld a local prohibition against "testing, 13 storage, transportation and disposal" of five highly toxic 14 chemical warfare agents within city limits. The court noted that 15 "not every regulation which has some incidental effect on a 16 defense program is invalid under the supremacy clause." Id. at 17 449.

18           Without necessarily agreeing with the reasoning or 19 outcome of Arthur D. Little, the court finds it distinguishable.
20 The regulation in Arthur D. Little was a relatively narrow public 21 health and safety regulation. On the other hand, Oakland's much 22 broader Ordinance, which regulates city investments and 23 contracts, and which expresses a general disapproval of nuclear 24 weapons, is clearly designed to interfere with, and encourage 25 change in federal nuclear policy.

26           Finally, defendant cites Board of Trustees v. City of 1 Baltimore, 317 Md. 72, 562 A.2d 720 (1989), in support of its 2 position that the Ordinance's restrictions on contracting and 3 investing are constitutional. In Board of Trustees, the Court of 4 Appeals of Maryland upheld two Baltimore City ordinances 5 requiring Baltimore employee pension systems to divest their 6 holdings in companies doing business in South Africa.

7       However, Board of Trustees did not involve interference 8 with the national defense authority of the United States, and the 9 United States was not a party to the action. Furthermore, in 10 Board of Trustees, the court found that Baltimore's ordinances 11 did not "interfere" with or "frustrate" federal law, and that the 12 effect of the ordinances was "minimal and indirect." Id. at 743, 13 744 and 746. In contrast, Oakland's effort to "punish" firms for 14 performing nuclear weapons work constitutes a direct interference 15 with exclusive federal war powers.

16       The court concludes that those provisions of the 17 Ordinance that prohibit nuclear weapons work; regulate the use or 18 transportation of nuclear weapons and hazardous radioactive 19 materials; prohibit, with some exceptions, Oakland from 20 contracting with, or investing in nuclear weapons makers; require 21 the posting of signs at facilities engaged in nuclear weapons
22 work; and require annual reports by persons engaged in activities 23 covered by the Ordinance, violate the War Powers Clauses of the 24 Constitution.

25 3. Preemption:

26       Various provisions of the Ordinance are also inconsistent

1 with, and preempted by certain federal statutes, regulations, and 2 executive orders. The court recognizes that there is a 3 presumption against preemption of state law by federal law.
4 Furthermore, unless the federal government "evidences an intent
5 to occupy a given field," there must be an actual conflict 6 between state and federal law for the state law to be preempted.
7 Silkwood v. Kerr-McGee Corp., 464 U.S. 238, 248 (1984).

8         The Ordinance restricts transportation of "nuclear 9 weapons or other hazardous radioactive materials." These 10 provisions are preempted by the Hazardous Materials
11 Transportation Act ("HMTA"), and regulations issued thereunder, 12 which occupy the field of radioactive materials transportation
13 safety. See Department of Transportation Inconsistency Ruling 14 No. IR-30, 55 Fed. Reg. 9678 (March 14, 1990) (finding that the 15 provisions of the Ordinance that apply to the transportation of 16 hazardous materials, including the loading, unloading, and 17 storage incidental to that transportation, are inconsistent with 18 the HMTA and its regulations).

19         The Ordinance also regulates the military applications of 20 atomic energy and the safety aspects of nuclear development. In 21 these respects, it is preempted by the Atomic Energy Act. See 42
22 U.S.C. §§2013(c) and 2021; Silkwood, 464 U.S. at 250; Stokes v.
23 Bechtel North American Power Corp., 614 F.Supp. 732, 739-41
24 (N.D.Cal. 1985). Defendant argues that the City of Oakland may 25 regulate civilian nuclear reactors, and plaintiff concedes in its 26 briefs "that the City has a very limited role to play in the 1 location and construction of civilian nuclear reactors." Reply

2 Memorandum in Support of Plaintiff's Motion for Partial Summary 3 Judgment at 20 n.22. However, the Ordinance extends beyond the 4 bounds of Oakland's limited role.

5 Finally, the reporting provisions of the Ordinance are in 6 actual conflict with, and therefore preempted by, the federal 7 regulations, statutes and executive orders that prohibit the 8 disclosure of classified and sensitive unclassified information.
9 See, e.g., 42 U.S.C. §§2163, 2165, 2168 and 2274; Executive 10 Order 12356 (50 U.S.C. §410 Note) and 10 U.S.C. §130.

11 4. Severability:

12 The Ordinance has a severability provision that provides 13 that "[i]f any section, subsection, paragraph, sentence or word 14 of this [Ordinance] shall be held to be invalid, either on its 15 face or as applied, the invalidity of such provision shall not 16 affect the other sections . . . ." Defendant has argued that 17 this severability provision should be applied to retain those 18 portions of the Ordinance that plaintiff does not challenge.

19 So many provisions of the Ordinance are either 20 unconstitutional or preempted that the court could easily 21 conclude that the few provisions that remain cannot stand 22 separate from the whole and still reflect the will of the people.
23 However, this issue is not before the court and will not be 24 addressed at this time. Those portions of the Ordinance that are 25 not challenged by plaintiff shall remain in effect, and are not 26 affected by this order.

ORDER

Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED AS FOLLOWS:

1) The Court declares those portions of the Ordinance that prohibit nuclear weapons work; that regulate the use or transportation of nuclear weapons and hazardous radioactive materials; that prohibit, with some exceptions, Oakland from contracting with, or investing in nuclear weapons makers; that require the posting of signs at facilities engaged in nuclear weapons work; and that require annual reports by persons engaged in activities covered by the Ordinance, facially unconstitutional and invalid, in violation of the War Powers Clauses of the United States Constitution.

2) The Court declares those portions of the Ordinance that restrict transportation of nuclear weapons or other hazardous radioactive materials; that regulate the military applications of atomic energy and the safety aspects of nuclear development; and that require reports by persons engaged in activities covered by the Ordinance, preempted by the Hazardous Materials Transportation Act, 42 U.S.C. §1801 et seq., and regulations issued thereunder; the Atomic Energy Act, 42 U.S.C. §2011 et seq.; or federal regulations, statutes and executive orders prohibiting the disclosure of classified information and sensitive unclassified information.

3) The Court enjoins enforcement of all substantive provisions of the Ordinance with the exception of Section 7(b)(i), (ii) and (iii) (which relate to investment by the City

1 of Oakland in United States Treasury securities), and with the 2 exception of that portion of Section 9(a) that requires the 3 posting of signs on city streets at the city boundary.

4 4) Plaintiff's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment is 5 GRANTED.

6 5) While plaintiff does not move for summary judgment on 7 its second cause of action, that cause of action, which alleges 8 that portions of the Ordinance violate the Commerce Clause, is 9 moot as a result of this order.

10 6) Defendant's Motion for a Continuance pursuant to Rule
11 56(f) is DENIED.

12 7) Defendant's Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment is 13 DENIED.
